WHEREAS, the Providence School Board recognizes the vital need for students to learn the fundamentals of government and the principles of democratic society, in order to effectively engage and participate in government, and influence policies and laws for the good of society; and

WHEREAS, by embedding civics education throughout each year of study from kindergarten through grade twelve for all students, young people will learn the foundations of “government of the people, by the people, for the people,” as well as the practical tools to perpetuate this ethos; and

WHEREAS, Providence Public School District is developing curriculum for both classroom and hands-on and community-based civics learning that ranges from local to global themes, which will enable students to not only study how others participate in government, but also to practice participating and taking informed action themselves; and
